Summary: Green takes his responsibility as leader very seriously, even if the others don't. So what happens when Green is captured by a massive Moblin? Who steps up to save him? (Imagine that Goron from OoT, the one that needs eye drops. Same size as the Moblin.)

1. Bombs!

Heyho! I'm here with a quick little one shot to pass the time before I update Hiding In Plain Sight again. You don't have to read that story to understand though! Mainly because this is in the four swords game! Also, all my knowledge of four swords comes from the manga, as I have never had the opportunity to play the game.

inches closer to Legend of Zelda. Grabs it. Runs away screaming. Gets tackled by Reggie.

"How did you catch me so fast?"

"My body was ready."

(AKA my weird way of saying I don't own the Legend Of Zelda)

Green, Blue, Vio, and Red had been walking for a couple days now. With nothing to do. And no one to talk to besides each other.

Needless to say, it had been chaotic. Blue found bombs. End of story.

That isâ€¦ Until he angered a particularly massive Moblin.

"RUN!"

"THAT'S WHAT IM DOING. WHY WOULD I NOT BE RUNNING?!"

"RED WHY ARE YOU STOPPING."

"There's a cliff."

"Oh."

Running didn't work very well.

Let's cover how this actually happened.

'Flash back.'

"We should bomb it."

"No Blue. It's the biggest Moblin we've ever seen, and it's sleeping. Why would we bomb it and wake it up?"

"you're such a party pooper Green. What makes you think you're the leader of us?"

"Oh, I don't know. Maybe because I'm the only sensible one!"

"oh? I CAN BE SENSIBLE." Red tried to intercept, "Blue you're yelli-"

_"I CAN BE TOTALLY SENSIBLE." _

He then lit the fuse to one of the bombs, and hurled it at the sleeping Moblin. Which led to the whole running fiasco.

'Flashback end'

The Moblin lowered its massive spear at the Links. "Which one of you tiny people hit me!" It bellowed.

Blue swallowed nervously, but before he could step up, Green stepped forward.

"It was me. Leave them alone." He claimed, gesturing at the other Links. "Green what are yo-"

Blue was cut off by the Moblin. "You take full responsibility?"

Green nodded.

The Moblin growled, then grasped Green in one massive, meaty, hand.

"Wait! No! Don't take him! Please!" Red was crying now, and even Vio looked scared.

Blue looked shocked, confused, worried, and sad. Unusual for Blue.

Then, the Moblin walked away. It's steps were too big for the other Links to try and keep up.

LINEBREAK.

"OW!" Green had been silent up until then, as the Moblin had been holding him surprisingly gently.

Like he wanted Green to be in good condition. He was worried that the Moblin was going to display him or something.

That was until the Moblin chucked him into a cave, with the only exit above his head. Torches lined the walls, and there was metal grates on either side.

Green moved over to a wall free of grates, and sat down. He was only glad that it was him here, not Blue, or Red, or Vio.

He had been sitting there for a while, when he felt the ceiling shake. The Moblin was back.

It peered down into the hole in the ceiling. "You must fight."

"Wait, fight who? Fight what?"

"Fight."

There was the sound of a lever being pulled, and one of the gates opened. A wolfos loped out.

'This is going to be tough, I've gotten used to fighting in a teamâ€¦'

With the other Links

"Oh no. Ohnoohnoohnoohnoohnoohnoohno." Red had been repeating 'Oh No' as a mantra ever since the Moblin took Green.

Vio had been silent, and Blue was fuming. "What makes him think he can just take responsibility like that?" They all heard the unspoken part. _'What makes him think he can just sacrifice himself?'_

"Sitting around here is pointless. We should be trying to help him. It's what he would do for us." And what Vio stated was true. Green wouldn't of hesitated if it had been one of them in danger.

Red sniffled and wiped his nose on his sleeve, and Blue calmed down to aâ€¦ More manageable level.

"Now, let's split into teams of two-" Vio cut off, realizing his mistake too late. Blue got angry again and Red started bawling once more.

Back with Green

His chest heaved and the cuts he had gotten, not very many, but they were deep, stung. The Moblin had him fight monster after monster, cheering when one landed a hit. It booed when Green killed any though. The difficulty of the monster was raised each time, and it eventually got so far that there was no monsters left.

The Moblin grumbled and stood. It wasn't letting Green get off that '_easy'._

Green was fine with the breather while it went and got more monsters.

After a while though his thoughts began to wander._ 'I shouldn't have left them. We coulda taken it down! No we couldn't. We were on a cliff. I wish I had a red potionâ€¦ Why does Red get to carry them? Because he can tell when you're hurt, even if you're trying to hide it. Makes sense why it was so gentle... Didn't want to hurt me before I had a chance to fight...'_ His most prominent thought was _'Where are you guysâ€¦'_

A/N Dammit. I think I've started another story, although this ones only gonna be two chapters long. Plus, longest chapter yet! This just wrote itself, I only pressed the keys. ~ShadeShadow

2. Shadows

Heyho! I'm now a Beta reader! Whoo! Still don't own the Legend Of Zelda. I will catch Reggie off guard one dayâ€¦ Heheheheh

Vio had taken to comforting Red, and Blue, surprisingly. After Blue had finished his rant about how stupid what Green had done was, Vio had been shocked to see tears forming in the corner of his eyes. Soon, they all were hugging each other, crying.

But then again, weren't they all hurting?

Finally, after what seemed like ages, Blue straightened up. "Enough moping around! We have a leader to go save! Vio, options!"

Vio blinked, surprised. "W-wellâ€¦" Vio stammered, once again surprised by the sudden change in Blue's emotions. Then, he straightened as well, one arm still wrapped around Reds shoulders. He sniffed, and wiped his eyes. "The Moblin was definitely heavy, so if we back track to the cliff, we should find its tracks, and follow them to where it took Green."

"Alright!" Red cheered, finally cheering up. "Let's go help Green!"

With Greenâ€¦

Somehow, someway, he had fallen asleep. With his thoughts going a hundred miles an hour, and injuries, he would have thought sleep impossible, until he was woken by a thunderous shaking. He blinked his eyes, a little fuzzy as to what was happening. The ceiling shook, and little chunks of rock crumbled under the pressure, raining on Green.

The Moblin stomped into view, a glare evident on its face. Soon after it arrived, an all to familiar sneering face was brought into view. "My my my. What do we have here?" He taunted. Green glared up at him. "Shadow."

You see, the Moblin had been causing quite the commotion, it wasn't very stealthy. It didn't have a very big brain either. While chasing a stray Wolfos, it caught the attention of Shadow, who, in turn, confronted it, leading us to where we are now.

Shadow cackled, a rotten, twisted sound. "Who would thought of it? The hero," he taunted once more, in a sickeningly sweet tone, "captured by a Moblin of all things."

The Moblin scratched its head, thought about the statement, and took it as a compliment. Green glared up at Shadow, opening his mouth to respond, when he coughed up blood, only making Shadow cackle all the harder. Wiping tears away from his ruby eyes, Shadow faced the Moblin. "So, you enjoy seeing him fight? Wellâ€¦ So do I!" And Shadow shove the massive Moblin down the pit. It landed heavily, and let out a bellow. "Why you do that?"

"Fight him. Entertain me."

With the other Linksâ€¦

After some walking, a chu-chu, a dance number with the chu-chu, getting directions from the chu-chu, and some falling over nothing, they reached the cliff. "Ok, spread out, find where the foot prints are." Vio commanded. After a good few minutes spent searching, Red and Vio heard a cry from Blue. "OVER HERE!" It was certainly a louder cry than Vio could muster, and he had no idea how Blue managed it.

Sure enough, there was massive indentations in the ground, shaped roughly like the sandals Moblins were so fond of wearing. They lead off into the forest, where, Vio had no idea how the lost it. It's was knocking over trees like twigs for crying out loud! The Links steeled themselves for whatever they may find, and set off, following the trail.

With Greenâ€¦

Green panted heavily, the fight had not been going well. The Moblin, it turned out, did NOT like taking hammers to the face. (If there wasn't a hammer in four swords, there is now!) it had taken to swinging its spear around, much like a spin attack. He had let himself be caught off guard once. Once. He took the brunt of the blow, flew into a wall, and if his ribs weren't broken before, they certainly were now! The Moblin took the opportunity, and with Shadow cackling above like a mad man, was dropping the spear on him, by holding the handle, blunt side down, and dropping the blunt side on Greens stomach, his arm, his leg, everywhere. Finally, just as the Moblin flipped the spear, taking a second longer than normal, Green rolled out of the way. Not quite far enough to avoid a massive cut to his side, but enough to not be impaled. 'Guysâ€¦ This would be an awesome time to show upâ€¦' Green thought, as the Moblin reached down, and picked him up by his neck, and slamming him against the wall, leaving another crater. Green cried out in pain, only making Shadow cackle harder. The impact caused Green to drop his sword and shield, as he was left to scrabble desperately at the Moblins meaty fingers.

With the other Linksâ€¦

They had come across a cave, the tracks leading them inside.

"What's the worst that could happen?" Blue said, with a shrug. "Shadow in a bikini." Vio responded. "Or the Moblin in a thong."

"NOT MENTAL IMAGES I NEEDED, THANK YOU." Blue screeched, tugging his cap over his eyes. Any further conversation was cut off by a cry of pain, echoing out of the cave, and distinctively familiar, in a bad way, laughter.

Unwittingly, the three Links all straightened up, glared into the cave, and took off, swords and shields drawn, ready to slaughter anything that got in the way. At the same time.

Shadow never saw it coming, or stood a chance. They spotted the hole in the floor, only to see a sight they would not soon forget.

Their leader. Their friend. Part of them, going slack in the grip of a Moblin.

Umâ€¦ Wowâ€¦ I went a little overboard with the whumpingâ€¦. Eh. It wrote itself I swear. Also, didn't worry, as stated in the manga, Shadow can just come back from that mirror

Ive decided to do a little special thanks area!

Special thanks to:

Wolvesandwerewolvesprotector for following!

End special thanks.

Yes, I know more people have done so, but wolvesandwerewolvesprotector is the only one who followed since I decided to do special thanksâ€¦ Plus my email deletes itselfâ€¦ . ~ShadeShadow

3. Healing

Heyho! Iâ€¦ Have nothing to say. Aside from the fact I do not own the Legend Of Zelda.

Green's P.O.V

Green saw the world through blurry eyes. There was a large, brownish blobâ€¦ It seemed to be holding him upâ€¦ How strange. Then, a Violet smudge, a Red smudge, and a Blue smudge attacked the brown blob. There was a brief sensation of falling, and then of warmth. The brown blob had disappeared, and the Red, Violet, and Blue smudges were leaning over me. It's hard to describeâ€¦ But I felt safe.

Red, Vio, and Blue's P.O.V

As soon as Green's arms fell down to his sides, we snapped out of our stupor, and attacked. As if we had practiced, or rehearsed what would happen, we attacked as one. Blue went for the arm holding Green, Red swung his sword over the Moblin's face, distracting it, and Vio went for its legs. Within a couple seconds, it was down, and Green was falling.

Vio, Red and Blue once more acted as one. Each grabbed Green before he hit the ground. They watched as Green's eyes opened, and heard as he whispered a word. "Safeâ€¦"

LINEBREEEAAAAK!

They had carried Green out of the cave, and set up camp in the forest, far, far away from the Cave. Vio treated Green's wounds, cleaning the gashes, and bandaging his ribs. Red went to the closest town, getting medication, as a couple infections had set in. Blue had never left Green's side.

Finally, after two weeks, Green woke up. Blue was the first to notice.

"B-Blue?" Green stammered. Blue blinked fully awake, he had been half asleep. "Green! You're awake!" Blue's excitement soon faded. "I-I'm sorry. Iâ€¦ It's my fault you're like thisâ€¦" Green blinked. "Blueâ€¦ Don't blame yourselfâ€¦ If anythingâ€¦ It's my faultâ€¦" Blue interrupted Green. "WHAT? YOU CANT BLAME YOURSELF! ITS MY FAULT! I THREW THE BOMBS! I DIDN'T TAKE THE BLAME! I DIDN'T LISTEN TO YOU!" Blue's shouting attracted Red and Vio, just in time to hear Green's response. "Noâ€¦ It's my fault for not being a better leaderâ€¦" Green rasped.

That's when Red butted in. "GREEN! YOURE AWAKE! OHIWASSOWORRIEDITHOUGHTYOUDNEVERWAKEUPIWASSOSCARED!" Red exploded.

Vio intercepted. "Don't you dare do anything like that ever again!"

Once all was said and done, the Links couldn't help but embrace, and eventually, fall asleep in a dogpile.

Tadaaaaaa! This just needed a fluffy ending! XD
